

Damn.

Channel: Tim Luong · Published: Aug 23, 2026 · Watch: <https://www.youtube.com/shorts/IHQbFAb01ZI> Source: full transcript

Executive Summary

A short comedic clip where Tim asks a friend who they see him marrying, and the friend brutally roasts him, predicting he'll still be single and "running the streets" at 37–38.

Contents

-  The Setup: Tim Asks a Serious Question
-  The Roast: Still Running the Streets at 38

The Setup: Tim Asks a Serious Question 0:00

- Tim sincerely asks his friend who they picture him marrying
 - He pushes for honesty: "No, come on, bro. Who do you actually see me with like 5 years from now married?"
- The friend immediately deflects, claiming they have no idea

The Roast: Still Running the Streets at 38 0:23

- The friend flatly says they do not see Tim married in 5 years
 - Reason given: "You still running the streets"
- The friend invokes the viral escalating saxophone TikTok sound as a metaphor
 - Predicts Tim will be 37 or 38, still unmarried, with that sound playing over his life
 - The implication: his romantic choices keep leading nowhere — specifically blaming "chasing these BBL demons"
- The clip ends on laughter and the implied sting of the roast landing